Liturgical Reflection

Risen Lord of heaven and earth, open our eyes to be aware that You are the Lord of our life, despite our failures.

Today’s first reading shows us how the Apostles dealt with the high priest who was assigned, to delight in beauty, music, love and laughter. Human not less human. He wants us to pursue a vocation, to be responsible in the tasks assigned, to delight in beauty, music, love and laughter. Instead of being honoured by the sudden fruitfulness of their earlier failed efforts leads the Apostles to a realization of the fruitfulness of their earlier failed efforts.

Jesus’ resurrection is the beginning of God’s new project not to snatch people away from heaven to earth but to impregnate earth with the life of heaven. God wants us to be more human not less human. He wants us to pursue a vocation, to be responsible in the tasks assigned, to delight in beauty, music, love and laughter.

Thoughts for Prayer SHALOM

Heaven is where the will of God is perfectly fulfilled. Through human rulers, who are good stewards of God’s creation, God exercises His lordship on earth. Earthly rulers, nevertheless, may not always exercise their stewardship in good spirit. This makes it difficult for many of us to experience God’s lordship in a human world marked by injustice, pain, and moral disorder.

He wants us to pursue a vocation, to be responsible in the tasks assigned, to delight in beauty, music, love and laughter.

By the Lake Tiberias, the Risen One meets his followers who recognized him only after the miraculous catch; with the exception of the beloved disciple who encouraged Peter to meet the Lord. It is clear that only through the eyes of faith and heart can we understand the mystery of the resurrection. Jesus then engaged Peter in an intensive dialogue, which can be considered as a triple recuperation of love after his triple denial. The Risen One confirms him in his mission as pastor, reminding him to be prepared to offer his life.
