Thoughts for prayers SHALOM

St John speaks of Jesus breathing his last breath and dying in a simple but enigmatic and even mystical way so that we must understand the words “He handed over the spirit” as a theological statement concerning Pentecost: He sent the Holy Spirit on his mother Mary and the Beloved disciple, symbols and representatives of the Church. Speaking of the Risen Jesus, St John tells us that Jesus bestowed the Holy Spirit on his disciples. In neither case is his account as dramatic as St Luke’s account in Acts. People who are not finely attuned to reading the Gospel according to John may even find a contradiction between what he says and what Luke records.

Any account of any event can contain many “parameters”, that is, details of places and time such as geographical, political or religious locations or time of the day, feast day, year of a particular reign. In recounting such an event not all writers will note all the details. Thus John prescinds from these “parameters” in speaking of Jesus handing over the Spirit in order to emphasize the necessary theological insight that the coming of the Spirit was part of the whole mystery of Jesus. We cannot separate the Holy Spirit from the mission of Jesus.

Come, Holy Spirit, in our day and age and guide us into the truth.

The “Pentecost of John” is set in the Passover meal, as opposed to the text of Luke, which places it fifty days after, like the Hebrew feast. The Risen Christ is the source of the gift of the Holy Spirit, promised five times at the Last Supper. Jesus performed the symbolic gesture of breathing, evoking the breath of the Spirit on the day of creation (Gn 1:2). This produces a rebirth of the human creature, which is continued in the words of Christ in the apostolic ministry of reconciliation: Receive the Holy Spirit, those whose sins you have forgiven, they are forgiven.
